Alternating Air Mattresses

Your Comfort, Supported Day and Night

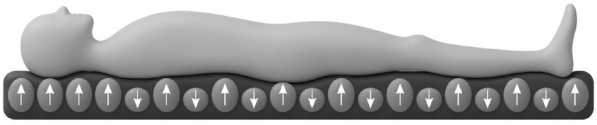

Rest more comfortably with alternating air cells that help redistribute pressure. Whether you need a mattress overlay or a full replacement, explore options to support your individual pressure care needs at home or in a care setting.

Pressure & Reperfusion

When a person has limited movement, pressure builds up at bony prominences and weight bearing body parts. The pressure leads to the occlusion of small blood vessels, which restricts blood flow and oxygen delivery to the tissue. This causes cell and tissue death, which results in Pressure Injury.

The Active Air range alternates in a 1-in-2 pattern so that 50% of body weight is relieved of pressure. This ‘pressure on / pressure off’ cycle encourages reperfusion and facilitates pressure reduction.

1:2 Cycle

Elasticised air cells “rebound” quickly to maximise the pressure-off time.

Cushions and Supports

The Right Support for Better Sitting

Cushions and supports provide options for everyday seating, positioning, and more complex pressure care needs. With different shapes, materials, and levels of support available, users and occupational therapists can find a solution suited to individual needs, seating environments, and daily routines.

Understanding pressure injury risk

The icons beside each cushion indicate the pressure injury risk levels it is designed to support, helping you compare options across the range.

L Low Risk M Medium Risk H High Risk V Very High Risk

Your risk level depends on factors such as mobility, skin condition, and overall health. A healthcare professional can assess your seating needs and help you choose a suitable pressure care cushion. Use these icons as a guide alongside their advice.
